CAR TURNS OVER; WOMAN HURT

Mrs. Sam Levett of New York city, one of a party of seven, was injured Saturday morning about 10:30 o'clock when the automobile in which she was riding went over the bank at Mt. Tremper and turned completely over. The other occupants of the car received slight injuries but none of the party were seriously injured and all returned to New York city this morning. The accident happened just north of Ingersoll's store where there is a sharp turn in the state road at the junction of the Lake Hill road. The driver of the car evidently was undecided which road to take and made a quick turn to continue on toward Phoenicia when the car left the road and ran down the steep bank.

Mrs. Levett who was the most seriously injured was given medical aid and brought to Kingston by Montanye Randall and cared for at the Kemble Sanitarium on Clinton avenue. The entire party returned to their homes this morning.

SOLDIERS' GRAVES WERE DECORATED

The Decoration Day program as arranged was carried out in detail on Monday morning when the school children and the veterans of the wars of this country marched to the cemeteries and decorated the graves of the soldiers.

At the close of the ceremonies at the various cemeteries the parade was reformed and marched to the city hall where patriotic exercises were held the Memorial Day address being delivered by the Rev. W. F. Stowe of the Reformed Church of the Comforter, who delivered an eloquent and stirring address.

At Montrepose cemetery the Rev. Dr. Ellis delivered the invocation, and the Memorial Day address was delivered by the Rev. B. M. Kaplan of Temple Emanuel.

Among other things Dr. Kaplan said: "It is fitting that this beautiful time honored ceremony of honoring our illustrious dead should be held in conjunction with our schools and in the presence of our school children, the future citizens of our great republic. In the time of the Revolution a young school teacher offered up his life on the altar of American patriotism with the regret that he had but one life to lose for our country. That teacher was Nathan Hale. Since his time our schools have been our perennial source of patriotism. It has been pointed out that while our boundary lines extend thousands of miles, our forts are few. We may have but few fortifications in the strictly technical military sense, but in the educational and patriotic sense, we have three hundred thousand forts scattered throughout the length and breadth of the land; there are our schools, numbering an army of twenty-one million little patriots who as they grow in years will grow into big patriots who will answer the country's call if need be as our immortal heroes had done before them.

"There are two kinds of patriotism. One is the patriotism which springs from instinct, the instinct of self preservation, self defense, the defense of home and family. Such patriotism is spontaneous. The other patriotism springs from the appreciation of the principles, the ideals and the aspirations of of the country. Such patriotism is inculcated in the hearts and minds of the young by our schools. The text book on patriotism is our history. No other is needed. No book on civics or citizenship is so enlightening and so inspiring as American History, intelligently and patriotically interpreted."

Dr. Kaplan pointed out in eloquent and clear terms the ideal nature and character of American patriotism as reflected in the Revolution, the Civil War, the Spanish American War and the World War where our patriot sons fought for the highest and noblest principles of liberty, justice and humanity.

Dr. Kaplan said that an Athenian statesman once remarked that the Spartans ceased to be patriots when the children no longer remembered the heroes of Thermopylae.

"Our children," said Dr. Kaplan, will never forget our beloved heroes and self sacrificing patriots who cheerfully gave their lives for the country's and humanity's good with but one regret, that they had only one life to lose. And as long as our illustrious dead will be remembered, the American people will be decided to cut out that which makes no distinction between creed and creed, or race and race, but which looks upon all law abiding citizens as constituting our nation, the American nation, dedicated to the principles of liberty, justice and humanity."

POLISH REBELS TURNED BACK

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Berlin, May 31.—Polish insurgents attempted to cross the Oder River near Rybnik, in Silesia, but were defeated by German volunteers, said an Oppeln despatch to the Neue Berliner Zeitung today.

The Poles have evacuated the following towns, all of which were subsequently occupied by Germans—Walzen, Wachow, Leschna, Zembowitz, Bogowian, Slawa and Kalinowitz.

A great ovation was given by the residents of Glewitz to the Italian and British troops who entered the city. Officers were carried on the shoulders of enthusiatic townsmen, and garlands of flowers were hung about the necks of the soldiers. A similar demonstration of friendliness was given to the British soldiers of the Black Watch Regiment that entered Oppeln. Women and children pelted the Britishers with flowers and men waved their hats and cheered.

CAUGHT WEARING DRESS SHE STOLE

And Anna Halstead, 19 Years Old, is Sent to Bedford by Judge Schirick—While Employed in the R-G-R Store She Had Stolen Numerous Articles.

Anna Halstead, 19 years old, of 30 Maiden Lane, was committed to the Bedford Institution for Women until discharged by law this morning by Judge Harry E. Schirick in police court. Anna was arrested by the police at Lake Mohonk on Decoration Day wearing a dress she had stolen from the R-G-R store on North Front street.

From the evidence as brought out this morning the girl had been employed in the R-G-R store, and while employed there had stolen articles of clothing. She was charged with stealing a dress and underskirt, and had left the employ of the store and was working at Lake Mohonk.

After a consultation with the district attorney's office Judge Schirick agreed to accept a plea of guilty to petit instead of grand larceny, which is a grand jury offense, and at the request of the girl's mother that her daughter be sent to some institution, the court committed her to Bedford. The girl has been running around with the gang of young boys who assaulted the colored girl last summer on Field Court, and her folks could do nothing with her.

GASOOL HITS VARIOUS THINGS

With His Trusty Hupmobile—His Holiday Trip Soured By Collision With Ford Which Will Prove Costly.

Early Monday evening Meyer Gasool, a tailor of No. 9 Main street, paid a large repair bill for work on his Hupmobile which he had damaged when he ran in a tree along the Ashokan boulevard two weeks ago, and then entering the Hup he started for a little trip about town. He reached Wall street in the vicinity of the court house when he saw a Colonial trolley car approaching. After his experience with a tree two weeks ago, Mr. Gasool has been somewhat nervous about running an auto. The Colonial car seemed to be four times the size of the usual trolley car, and Mr Gasool, remembering that the tree did not move when he struck it, feared that the big trolley car also might resist the efforts of his Hup if they should come together. In some way he plunged into a Ford touring car owned by Mr. Hansen of Atwood, which was standing in front of the Advance Restaurant, damaging the Ford to such an extent that the repair bill will be almost as large as the bill he had just paid, and then drove his Hup on the sidewalk but stopping it a few inches from the plate glass window of Ralph D. Clearwater. The Hup was uninjured, and after the excitement had subsided Mr. Gasool drove it back to the garage instead of taking a trip around town. He reached the garage without further adventure and is still an enthusiastic motorist.

FARMERETTES AT MARLBOROUGH

Farmerettes are to invade Marlborough again this summer to aid in harvesting crops.

The Marlborough fruit growers have decided to engage 200 of the farmerettes through the Industrial Commission of New York.

It is considered probable that this number will be increased when the first gathering season is at its height.

Last year there were more than 500 farmerettes at work in that section. They lived in "camps" and had music and various other amusements during the hours they were off duty.

The girls are said by the farmers to be skilled in the work required and are conscientious.

There is more or less of a shortage of male help on the farms and for this reason it is necessary to engage the farmerettes.

Last year Governor Smith visited Marlborough when a celebration was held at the close of the season.

VIADUCT LIGHTS NOW EFFICIENT

The Washington avenue viaduct was lighted on Saturday evening with its new lights. Heretofore it has been lighted by arc lights on poles from the street with an incandescent light at the creek end. The new lights eliminate these.

The new method consists of twelve electric lights with large white globes set upon standards about four feet in height which are fastened upon concrete posts of the viaduct railing. They are attractive and present a better appearance and give a better distribution of light than the former method. The lights are of a greater power than the incandescent lights but less than the street arcs.

The contract for this lighting was made about five years ago but on account of the war the company was not able to place the lights before. There will be very little additional expense as the new lights cost only practically the same as the lights eliminated.

HOW MR. TRAVER SAVED THE BABY

Roadside Operation By District Attorney Traver Who Removed Fish Hook From a Baby's Head.

While returning to Kingston early Sunday evening, District Attorney Traver stopped at a farm house along the Saugerties road to buy some freshly-gathered vegetables which were displayed and while thus engaged was startled to hear screams coming from a car a short distance away whose owner had been buying some fresh onions at the same farm.

The owner of the car came running toward Mr. Traver, shouting, "Come with me. Save my baby."

The increased volume of sound from the automobile, which was occupied by a Hebrew family returning to New York city, decided Mr. Traver to prompt action and he decided at all costs to save the baby.

When he reached the car he found three women and a man shouting and waving their arms as they looked at a small baby from whose scalp back to his ear a fish line ran to the end of a fishing rod which had been stowed away in the top of the car. The baby was squirming and also making considerable noise, but being only a small baby the volume of noise could not equal that of any of the elder members of the party.

The women and the man all begged Mr. Traver to save the baby, but did not indicate the danger from which he was to be saved However, Mr. Traver discovered a fish hook firmly embedded in the baby's scalp.

Experience in watching doctors perform autopsies has given Mr. Traver a good knowledge of human anatomy and he realized that prompt action was necessary to save the baby and prevent the fish hook from becoming so deeply embedded as to make an operation with surgical instruments and the administration of an anaesthetic necessary. He was not provided either with instruments or anaesthetic.

After some persuasion one of the members of the party was induced to become sufficiently quiet to hold the child's head while Mr. Traver attempted to break the fish hook with a pair of pliers. The pliers being adapted only to large bolts, however, were quickly discarded and by degrees Mr. Traver worked the hook back to the starting point although the operation was rendered somewhat painful to the screaming child by reason of the barb getting caught in the flesh.

A few minutes' work resulted in freeing the hook from the child's head and at once the baby stopped crying. The adult members of the party also stopped wailing and clapped their hands in delight informed Mr. Traver that he had saved the baby. The baby showed its appreciation by offering Mr. Traver some quinine and paddling its bloody little hand over his face. It also wanted to [illegible] Mr. Traver but the father had the engine in operation by that time and the party proceeded toward New York after being admonished to stop at some doctor's office to have the wound cleaned.

GERMANY MAKES FIRST PAYMENT

Billion Marks Indemnity Turned Over To Allies on Last Day of Grace—New Taxes Will Hit Militaristic Junkers Especially Hard.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Berlin, May 31.—Germany has paid her first billion gold marks to the Allies and today the cabinet gave final consideration to the new financial and industrial program which Chancellor Wirth will announce in the reichstag tomorrow. Taxes of unprecedented size will be imposed upon the Germans and especially upon the land holders. The "junkers", the big Prussian agriculturists who were leaders of the militarist party before the war, will be especially hard hit.

Germany has a brief breathing spell now having completed the payment of the first instalment of her war indemnity yesterday when Herr von Mayer-Keufbeuren, the German ambassador to Paris, turned over $200,000,000 to the reparations commission. Germany paid on the last day of grace. The billion had to be surrendered before May 31 under the terms of the Allied indemnity ultimatum of May 6.

The chief obstacle in the way of a complete German financial program is Upper Silesia. German officials expressed hopes today that the Allies would settle the troublesome issue at the earliest possible moment so that Germany would know how much she will benefit in the future from the coal mines, industries and agriculture of Silesia.

BAVARIAN ARMS PROBLEM SOLVED

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

London, May 31.—The troublesome question of disarmament in Bavaria has at last been satisfactorily settled, said a Central News dispatch from Berlin today. A list of the Bavarian organizations which will be disbanded at once under the terms of the Allied ultimatum of May 6 will be handed to General Nollet at once, the despatch added. General Nollet is head of the disarmament commission in Berlin.

Bavaria balked at demobilizing the Einwohnerwehr (the National Security Police) and Chancellor Wirth made a special trip to Munich to emphasize the importance of meeting the Allied demand in this respect. Then the Bavarian government made a counter proposal that the machine guns and artillery be surrendered but that the policemen be allowed to maintain their rifles. Premier von Kahr of Bavaria contended that the police were necessary to prevent Communist disorders.

RECOLLECTIONS OF CIVIL WAR VET

Being The Experiences of Nelson Fassett, Father of The Late E. H. Fassett of This City—Father And Son Served During The Entire War.

The following interesting recollections of his experiences as a Union soldier during the Civil War was written by Nelson Fassett, father of the late E. H. Fassett, formerly of this city. When the war broke out the father enrolled a company of soldiers, and his son, just 17 years of age, was one of the first to sign the muster rolls. The diary is now the property of Dr. C. F. Keefe of this city, and provides much interesting reading. The recollections follow:

About 1860 I was very pleasantly situated in the pleasantly located little valley of Jericho, Chittendon county, Vermont, having charge of a very nice grist and flour mill, with the assistance of my oldest son—at that time nearly 17 years of age.

At the time my family consisted of a wife and six lovely children, three sons, and three daughters. The daughters were all teachers, and the two youngest little boys were attending school, but in 1861 after the war broke out the oldest son, Edwin H. was badly troubled with war on the brain, and often asked consent of his father and mother to enlist and be a soldier, but was as often denied. For one reason that he was decidedly too young and slender built and although at 17 he was taller than myself and I am about six feet. Although he had always been a faithful and obedeant son, thus far, after a while I learned from outsiders that he said he was going into the army with or without consent, and I was not over and above pleased with the information.

After thinking the matter over and counseling with his mother I finally concluded that the war would last but a few months at the longest, and thought I would try an experiment with the boy. Consequently I went to Burlington on the 26th day of February, 1862, and enlisted myself with the proviso that if by any means I could scare or persuade the boy to give up the idea of war that fact was to make my own enlistment null and void otherwise solid.

In less than an hour I was appointed a recruiting officer and proper papers placed in my hands for the business and I started home.

I found my faithful boy seated at the mill desk figuring up the business of the day as he had been acting in my place during my absence for that day. I said to him "Ed., I am informed that you have said that you was going in to the army anyway."

He replied "Yes, sir."

Knowing his disposition so well I was sure that he meant business. I then presented him with a proper blank and said "If you are going to the war you are going man fashion. Down with your autograph, and I never saw him write Edwin H. Fassett better before or since.

I then said to him "now young man understand you are elected for three long years, live or die."

His reply was "Now I am satisfied."

Didn't I care worth a cent? Then according to contract I was elected, and my first recruit was my own son not yet 17 years old.

Again that same night we had another family consultation over the rather important matter of making things match (I am quite sure I never could go through it again).

I then sold out my interest in the mill, and made a business of recruiting for the army, and had very good success at that. My acquaintance was quite extensive and many thought that if I could leave my business and family to go into the army they could go also, and did.

A portion of our getting ready to leave our loved ones was to provide ways and means for their support for the comforts and necessities of life, to say nothing of luxuries, and our little state of Vermont excelled all others in that respect by giving a bounty of $7 per month to all volunteers and our government very wisely made an arrangement by which any soldier (if he chose) could allot (as it was called) to any friend or person he saw fit any portion of his monthly pay of $13 per month government pay that he felt disposed to.

My son an dmyself both allotted $10 per month of our $13 government pay, and both of the $7 state pay to Mrs. A. Jane Fassett the wife and mother for her and the younger children's benefit after we were gone, thus leaving them $34 a month to use as they thought proper and leaving my son and myself $3 per month each for spending money as I was supposed that the government would feed and clothe us and to a certain extent they did. I had a small amount of money with which I procured everything for their comfort and convenience that I could just before we were to leave the state for the front (as it was then termed) which was on the 25th day of April, 1862, that being my son's 17th birthday.

Over 600 of us started from Burlington that morning on the same train of cars going towards death as it proved to many. To my certain knowledge, more than one was cut down standing by my side.

But to go back to the morning we left Burlington. My son stayed there the last night from choice, but I from choice put in the last night at Jericho with my lovely family, but it was necessary for me to take the stage coach at 3 o'clock in the morning to meet my comrades in Burlington to take the train at 9 o'clock, and I did so. But, oh! that morning at 3 o'clock when my wife and I went upstairs and stepped softly into the sleeping rooms of our five sleeping babes, pictures of innocence all sound asleep, all sleeping beauties (to me) and at that time very strange reasons to think that I was then taking my last look of my treasures this side of the grave. The thought came to me in the strangest form and asking me why did I ever volunteer to bind myself in the strongest terms to tear myself away from all this and set myself up as a target to be shot at, and all this without even one cent's bounty as an inducement Echo answers "why" but the die was cast and I went.

But Webster's unabridged dictionary fails to furnish words to express my real feelings through this ordeal (but I still live) 67 years of age and fairly healthy, May 29, 1891. But to return, we left Burlington and the same afternoon arrived in New York city where we were treated tolerably well by the citizens. We next arrived at the city of Philadelphia near daylight the next morning, and there found almost everything that heart could wish. The finest of ladies and gentlemen patiently awaiting our arrival (as our train was very late) with all the necessities and luxuries possible to obtain for the comfort and happiness of the soldiers. We could have found nothing better, or nicer at the most popular hotel, than we found there at what was then called "Cooper's Institute." originated by a cooper at his humble cooper shop to feed a few poor, hungry soldiers as they passed through Pennsylvania on their way to the war, but the generous idea of the old cooper took like wild fire, and the outcome of it was the noted Cooper's Institute which was truly called a soldiers home and it remained so until the close of the war. Many, yes many, a soldier has been nicely fed and cheered on from that hallowed place, but now I must contrast it with Washington, D. C.

We went via Baltimore, and arrived in Washington in the evening where we all expected the best of treatment, but alas what a world of disappointment. We were all, 600 of us, thrust into the cheapest built nastiest kind of soldiers barracks with no fire, bunks or any other kind of sleeping or even resting conveniences, and when the feeding time came like other animals "Good Heavens"! sour baker's bread, boiled pork, some of which was fairly good, some was rusty, and some was literally rotten and would perfume the whole barracks. Then came coffee served in very large wooden pails such as are usually used for watering animals of all kinds and dished out to us in tin cups, and we had to take our ration and drink it all at that time or not at all. Some of us yet had a small supply of food that was eatable, some of which we had brought from home. Some that we obtained at Philadelphia, and some that we had bought with our own money. Soon after this trash was issued the whole building inside was filled with chuncks of pork and loaves of bread, thrown by the disgusted soldiers, but we all lived through the night, and the next morning we were put aboard a transport and landed at Yorktown, Va., just after a battle. There we found quite an array of hospitals, and an amount of wounded soldiers, one of which I found trying to eat bread and milk, but his under jaw was so badly shot away that the food would nearly all run through the cavity down into his lap and still he was awful hungry.

After looking it all over I told the ward master not to let my son come in there to see the wounded lest it would discourage him, and he granted my request.

That afternoon about 4 o'clock we all started toward Lee's Mills, through swamps, by roads, wood roads and thick heavy timber land, and it began to rain terribly and some time after dark we got into a newly partially cleaned field and our guide lost his way and we were compelled to camp on burnt black new land in a heavy rain storm without so much as a rubber blanket at that time (as we afterwards had) and our slim rations of food all gone as we expected to reach our respective regiments at Lee's Mills that night. But the next morning found us wet through, hungry, and ten miles to plod through the clay mud, to reach the fighting army. This was our first night with not the slightest shelter over us except the canopy of Heaven, and that nicely clouded, but after a long muddy tedious hungry march we found the old Vermont brigade which was at that time worth something.

Here we met a few of our old acquaintances, but they were then feeling quite sober for they had just had a battle and got badly beaten, lost several men, some killed and others wounded and the rest driven back where they started from.

The next day they had a re-examination of all 600 new men that looked in any way unfit for hard service, and my son was one to go before a board of three surgeons stripped and re-examined, and I flattered myself that they would certainly throw him out and send him home as they did several others, and two of the three decided against, but he was still anxious to stay, and the third one says to the others he had got the pluck and wants to stay, and we will pass so he was once more made happy and stayed his full three years, and twice in the time refused a furlough to come home, and at the last of his service I filled out the papers for his final discharge February 27, 1865, and a few weeks since I made out his first application for a pension.

We were eventually assigned to Company E, 2nd Vermont Volunteer Infantry, 2nd or Vt. Brigade, 2nd Division, 6th Army Corps.

We had a few battles between Yorktown to in front of Richmond. Our army kept up until we were within from four to six miles of Richmond so near that for several days we could hear the church bells distinctly, but soon after that the noted seven day's battles or retreat occurred, and after fighting all day and marching all night for seven days and nights we arrived at Harrison's Landing where we were protected by the gun boats on the James river, and remained there for some time, but previous to this I was somewhat inclined to trade and speculate in various ways as occasion presented itself.

It was a peculiar trait of soldiers when in camp to find one was to kill time as it was termed, and the first thing was to obtain, if possible, something to eat that was better than our usual rations of hard tack and pork, but it was seldom found for it was not there, but really the most important time killer with 90 out of 100 of all grades was playing cards, and we were generally paid off once in two mouths and then in from two to three weeks the money would nearly all be in the sharpest gamblers hands, and then most of the poor soldiers had no spending money left to buy food, luxuries or anything else of our suttlers or the citizens until next pay day, but many of them had from one to three months, $7 Vermont bounty due them, and the officers all had a stock of blank orders or checks to fill out for whatever was due them and endorse it on the back, and that made it just as good as gold anywhere in Vermont, provided they could find some one in the army that had the money to cash it and run the risk of sending it home by mail which oftentimes was very hazardous as the "Geurrillas" oftentimes captured the mails before they reached a peaceful country. But a little spending money they must have at some rate even at a sacrifice, and strange to say I never formed the least appetite for cards and have never played one game yet, and for the above reasons

Next came one of my opportunities for my hazardous speculations as they were aware that as a rule I generally had a little money and they would come and ask what or how much I was willing to give them per month for $7 orders, that provided they reached home safely were perfectly good for $7, but if not goodbye to what I had advanced. But I would chance it at from $3 to $5, never paying over $5, and then make it payable to Mrs. A. Jane Fassett, and send them by mail. I was fortunate enough not to lose one, and I bought several of them. At one time there were several New York officers gambling with some of our officers on a big scale, and one of the New York officers got broke, but had a hundred dollar check left that was perfectly good. He came and showed it to me and asked me what I would give him for it. I offered him $60 for it. He said make it $75, but I gave him $65, and had him make it payable to Mrs. A. Jane Fassett.

When she got it she went to one of the Burlington banks with it, but they did not know her, but she got E. R. Hard, Esq., to recognize her and she received the one hundred dollars for it.

At another time while we were in front of Richmond, Va., we were quietly situated in camp not much to do only the ordinary picket and camp duties, and one day I took a little stroll to see what I could find in particular with regard to something good to eat for one thing milk of which I was always very fond (and am yet) but then came the thought where will I find the good soft bread or biscuit to go with it provided I found the milk to buy as at that time we had plenty of fresh beef, a little pork, some boiled beans, but for some reason it seemed to be almost impossible to obtain anything in the line of bread, flour, meal or even anything like full rations of hard tack, but depend on what I have before mentioned together with a great plenty of the best kind of coffee which we always had plenty of.

Well I wandered off about 1½ miles from camp, but found no milk, but found something instead that eventually proved of far greater consequence. Just eight miles north of Richmond, Va. I found a large grist and flour mill (large for that country then) that was then owned by old Dr. Gaines who resided about a mile south of the mill. A red hot Confederate and a Yankee hater, and the mill had formerly been run by a white man by the name of Mcgee for grinding the wheat and a colored man by the name of Jackson to grind the corn, but both armies had been through there by turns and the old white miller then had three sons in the Confederate army, and consequently he dared not remain in the mill while the Yankees occupied that section of the country. As a result the mill had done no business for a long time, but the "darkie" miller hung around there as a sort of watchman to keep the "Yanks" from burning or damaging the mill.

I had before learned that there was an amount of wheat and corn close by or near the mill, and being a miller by occupation myself began to examine the whole concern and pumped the darkie miller and concluded the mill was capable of doing lots of business somehow.

But the question was how to accomplish it under existing circumstances but I was bound to try and did. After getting all the information I could from the darkie I then went to the house of McGee, made friends with the family consisting what was left of the miller and wife another young son Wellington by name, and a still younger daughter and a little darkie boy (slave) and after making peace and sounding him all I thought necessary I parted with him for that time very friendly indeed apparently and started back to camp, and on my way back on passing division General "Baldy" Smith's headquarters I took the liberty to call on the general and after saluting him in military style I informed him of my discovery. The general replied "Is that so?" Well that is worth looking after for we are very short of bread timber of every description and there is plenty of wheat and corn all over this country. But stop, where or how can we get it ground?"

I said "You get the grain and I will take care of the grinding part of it."

"What" he says "are you a miller?"

I said I never have done much else, and I have also a son with me that I have also learned the business.

He took our names, company and regiment and the next morning after we received a detail to N. Fassett and son to report at a certain cross roads about half way from our camp to the mill where we met a whole company of 67 men with all their camp kettles, cooks, tents, etc., in command of Captain Beattie. He came out and met us and asked if my name was Fassett. I said "Yes."

He then said he was ordered to report to me there with regard to Dr. Gaines mill for guard, etc., or anything else necessary.

We marched to the mill, then I had him detail a guard for both doors and I then hired the darkie miller at $7 per [illegible] to assist me and [illegible] [illegible] what was liable to come soon, and it came very soon.

At headquarters they sent out a lot of teams to confiscate all the wheat and corn they could find. Confiscate is a modest way of speaking "stealing." About as soon as we had got regulated at the mill the teams began to come with wheat and corn in every conceivable form, some in bags, some in barrels and some loose. I then ordered another detail of men to help handle it. Then I filled up the smut mill hopper with wheat and the corn mill hopper with corn and we commenced making flour and meal rapidly.

I then called in the company cook and told them it was all Uncle Sam's, and to just help themselves to all flour and meal that they could cook. The result was they were happy.

The next move was I went to Miller McGee's house and made a bargain with him or them to live or board with them while we stayed there. I furnished the flour, meal and coffee, and they the rest, and we lived like fighting cocks.

My boy slept with his 17 year old boy, and what sleep I got was in the mill for several weeks. The next move was to send word to our three brigade headquarters of the 2nd Division of the "confiscated" flour and meal which they did and then their men were all happy. Therefore under existing circumstances just as far as possible we were all a happy crowd, or as much so as possible in army life.

While there my colored miller told me that Dr. Gaines told one of his slaves that if he could get sight of that Yankee miller he would make a hole through him and some way General Smith heard of it and the next day there was a guard out "for around the doctor" house thus preventing his troubling me.

After we had got through with the "confiscated" grain I told my miller to tell the citizens and [illegible] that I would [illegible] the wheat and corn they would [illegible] me and pay them cash for it. I thought that until me venture nothing have. They brought lots of it, especially the latter and I paid them just what they asked for it anywhere from 25 cents up to 32 per bushel. We ground and sold [illegible] hundred dollars worth out of that and after we got it we knew not what to do with it but finally sent out to a [illegible] [illegible] to White House Landing the nearest express office to [illegible] it sent home all the way and all correct.

I wrote nothing to send with the package for I feared it never would reach Vermont and for that reason it was a great wonder at home where that money came from and they [illegible] [illegible] that it came from a dead Reb's pocket, etc., etc. But in the process of time I [illegible] a letter [illegible] acknowledging [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] and when I [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] A few weeks after we left the Gaines' mill the two armies had a fierce battle over the same spot. It is called in war history the battle of Gaines' mill in some histories, and in others battle of Gaines' hill but it is all the same thing.

The two armies were formed as follows: The Union army on the north side and the Confederate army on the south side of the mill, and during the battle both sides with shot and shell tore my mill all to pieces, but our side beat.

Soon after that came the seven days battle spoken of before. After stopping at Harrison's Landing for a long time to recuperate and get somewhat regulated and rested there was an order issued for a certain number of different grades composed of captains, lieutenants sergeants corporals and privates to be selected from the different departments to be sent home on recruiting service to fill up our broken ranks, and everybody wanted to be the favored one to be selected for that soft job, but, although many were called (or wanted to be) few were chosen. My own appetite for it was, to say the least, that but the question arose in my mind home, and with quite a portion of my department I was well aware that very much of the selections would be decided by our old Colonel Whiting, and I also knew that my particular friend and brother F. M. Captain and after that Colonel F. V. Randall had no small influence over the Old Colonel and the day before the selection came on [illegible] was cheap [illegible] I [illegible] him $25, and he [illegible] keep cool. I did so. When the time arrived Colonel Whiting says "Who shall we send from Company E, 2nd Vermont?"

Captain [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Well the old colonel says "[illegible] [illegible] [illegible] Clerk put down Nelson Fassett of Company E the [illegible] Randall [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] appointed [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] 725 [illegible] and I got a soft job for about [illegible] month and then [illegible] to the front [illegible] General Burnside [illegible] the [illegible] with his whole army in front of Petersburg, and the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] to get through [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] 1865. A long dreary time followed until spring and then [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] all round.

[illegible] one whole Division was ordered out and for what we knew not but soon we came in sight of a [illegible] [illegible] of wood. The [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] The [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] the brigade band [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] The second wagon contained three rough board coffins and the third contained three prisoners that had just received their sentence to be hung for deserting from our army and going over to the enemy and had been captured, tried and proven guilty and condemned by court martial.

When we got into the gloomiest spot in the woods we found a regular gallows with all the fixtures and the provost marshal and his guard ready for the business.

The prisoners were marched up onto the platform and the ropes adjusted around their necks, but no black caps. Nothing over their faces. After a short prayer by the chaplain their limbs were tightly confined. Then the signal was given and the drop fell. It was called more dishonorable to be hung than to be shot for desertion, and they went to the enemy and that is why they were hung.

Our whole Division was called out to witness it as a terror to the rest. At another time we were called out in a similar way. It seems that a young man from Fairfield, Vt., with another young married man with a wife and two little children at home had gotten all they cared for of the army and started for Vermont, but they were both captured, brought back, tried and sentenced to be shot. This time we came to a nice meadow and formed three sides of a hollow square, and the fourth an open side where two graves had been dug near each other and two rough board coffins near them and a stake drove near the head of each for a rest to steady them or to lean on while they were allowed to live.

After we were all formed so as to have a fair view the two convicts were led to their coffins by the guard and ordered to kneel on their coffins and steady themselves by the stakes and a bit of white paper fastened over their hearts for a mark to aim at.

The married man cried like a child all the time after he came in sight but the other young fellow remained plucky all through.

The provost guard had twelve muskets, eleven of them with ball and one a blank with nothing in it only powder. They were all in a pile like a pile of rails and the provost marshal ordered the twelve provost guard to march backward and touch down and back, then and take one of the guns. Thus each one hoped that he had the one containing the blank.

They then formed in front about twenty feet from the victims and when ready the provost marshal ordered the victims to take off their caps and blouses and the married man still crying bitterly took off his and dropped it [illegible] [illegible] the other took his off and threw it at the marshal [illegible] and [illegible] square in the face knowing he had but a minute to live.

[illegible] the guard [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] them said "Fire."

The young fellow dropped dead like a log, but the married man said "Oh, Dear Me Suz" and was at least five minutes dying.

One other time a similar arrangement for the same cause of three men. Their sentence was to be branded with a red hot iron made for the purpose in the shape of the letter "D".

One was stamped on his shoulder with the letter, another on his hip, and the last on the inside of his left hand, which spoiled his hand for life.

Other cases of desertion were punished in various ways. Some made spread eagles of, and some were sent to break stone for the government the remainder of their term of service without pay. Others had to carry a bag of sand or a block of wood on their back so many hours a day. For stealing, a placard was placed on their back marked "I am a thief," or "I stole from a Brother Soldier."

Fraternity the Great Need.

It was Victor Hugo who conceived this thought: "The true resistance of man against catastrophes is an augmentation of humanity. Love one another, aid one another. Solidarity of men is the retort to complicity of mysterious facts. It is thus that is established on earth the third term of the grand human formula, fraternity. Governments put obstacles in the way of liberty and equality, they will come in their time, in spite of the monarchy; equality in spite of the aristocracy. But fraternity is the opening door, the emptying purse, the helping hand."

KINGSTON, N. Y., MAY 31, 1921.

It seems incredible that the chief executive of any state of this nation would be false to his trust for so trifling a bribe as $700, yet ex-Governor Catts of Florida has been indicted for precisely that. Nor can it be urged that he was intoxicated when he did it, for he is described as "a shining light among the prohibitionists" of his state.

President Harding has done well to refuse to send Federal troops to Mingo county, W. Va., until that state has done its utmost to suppress lawlessness within its own borders. Expansion of the Federal power at the expense of the states is with good reason deplored, but for much of it the states themselves have been responsible owing to a disposition to sidestep their own duties and shoulder their burdens upon the Central government.

Some of the newspapers have declined to publish the "slacker" lists on account of the errors found in the first of them, but others are publishing them at the War Department's request on the ground that all real deserters should be pilloried and that the victims of error (due to their own carelessness) will be better off if they are thus forced to come forward and prove their innocence now than if the accusation against them should remain permanently on the records.

YOUTHFUL CENSORS.

We read that in Evanston, Ill., the young men of the Congregational Church Club "have declared the feminine dress of the day a proof of sinful purpose, and unanimously and solemnly have covenanted with each other never to speak to or walk with a young woman in a short skirt." That young men of such connections would disapprove of extremes in the feminine dress of the day, and that they should even make bold to say so, might be expected, but one would hardly expect even the most censorious of youths to be led into such extremes by a desire to judge and condemn. If short skirts are as ubiquitous in Evanston as elsewhere, these young men have practically cut themselves off from female society—a hasty step of which they are likely to repent even if the short-skirted maids of their town do not club together and ostracize their censors in turn.

These young men of Evanston could learn a lesson in moderation by reading the remarks of Bishop Burgess of the New York Episcopal Church on the same subject. "The old conventions of society," the Bishop said recently, "have given way to new. The dressing of many of our young women at the seashore or in the field of sport and in society seems to old-fashioned eyes to lack both dignity and propriety as well as grace and beauty." That was all, but it covered the ground, and such considerate criticism from such a source may have more effect than a dozen violent "strikes" such as the one reported from Evanston, granting that it is really to be taken seriously, which is doubtful.

THE CELEBRITY'S HOME TOWN.

On May 21 impressive ceremonies and carefully prepared addresses in the New York University's Hall of Fame marked the unveiling of memorial tablets to twenty-five famous Americans. The list contains widely known names of famous men and women, unquestionably, yet there is good reason to wonder what they were or are really remembered for in their home towns. The great majority of their early associates no doubt remembered or remember them not for the achievements bringing them the world's praise, but for some unimportant act or characteristic not in all cases to be classed as complimentary.

This tendency of the home town public finds admirable illustration in the account of the recent visit to his second birthplace after thirty-seven years by an at least moderately famous man. "Did they remember Herbert Winslow Collingwood," we read, "as the author of those ringing editorial articles which appeared in the Southern Live Stock Journal back in the '80s? No, they didn't. Did they recognize H. W. Collingwood as the veteran editor of the Rural New Yorker and the writer of its famous 'Hope Farm Notes?' They did not. But Collingwod had not been forgotten. All the old boys from 45 to 65 remembered him as the man who taught the Starkville baseball team to pitch a curve. The disillusioned editor came home and wrote a piece about the fragility of hopes." Far more famous men than Mr. Collingwood have had a similar experience. The home town is mainly interested in its own share in the making of the boy who fared forth and achieved elsewhere.

NEW GARDEN SOCIETY STARTS

The first meeting of the Society of Little Gardens of Kingston was held at the home of Mrs. F. W. Warren on Thursday, May 26, when officers were elected and a few very simple regulations governing the society were decided upon.

The original body of which this is one of the many branches was formed in Philadelphia, about ten years ago. The only requirement for eligibility to membership is love of flowers, birds and nature generally and the possession of a plant, a window box, a tree or a garden.

The society has expanded until there are many branches in many states. These have worked, not alone for their own pleasure but have been a great stimulus to the same sort of interest in the communities in which they live.

In Philadelphia, they have done much in reclaiming neglected church yards as well as neglected back yards and ugly corners. The motto of the society is "Yards and Yards."

Answers in Tomorrow's Nature Notes

Answers to Previous Questions.

1. Where do the snowbirds go in summer, and where do they hatch?

By snowbird we suppose the snowflake, Passerina nivalis, is meant. This bird breeds in Arctic regions, so that while the bird is familiar in its adult form in Canada and the Northern States, in winter, when it sometimes goes as far south as Illinois, Kansas and Georgia, only Arctic explorers or travellers well to the north, are likely ever to see a nest and young.

2. How does a Hawaiian forest look?

Vegetation in a Hawaiian jungle has the barbaric rankness of all tropical woods but nothing of the syvan sweetness of our home woods. There are no fine, towering trees, but low, gnarled, tortuous ones, which, with their hanging vines and their parasitic growths, have a riotous, dishevelled appearance. Nature in the tropics, left to herself, is harsh, aggressive and savage. She looks as though she wanted to hang you with her dangling ropes, or impale you on her thorns, or engulf you in her gigantic ferns.

3. Is the Rocky Mountain bighorn a sheep or a goat?

The bighorn is a mountain sheep. We have a Rocky Mountain goat in the far northwest and Alaska, but in the states it does not live below northwestern Montana. There are several varieties of mountain sheep, some living in British Columbia, and others as far south as lower California. Sheep and goats do not usually live in the same district. The bighorn has heavy ridged triangular horns that curve backward, spiral fashion. The ram has no beard, as male goats have.

Ancient Egyptian Homes.

The walls of the courts and rooms in ancient Egyptian homes were painted with brilliant colors and the floors were covered with woven mats and skins of wild animals. As for household furniture, the inmates of Egyptian homes slept upon the floors, others reposed upon straight couches richly inlaid, which often were lion-shaped, the head, back and tail of the animal forming the body of the couch and its legs the supports.

The political calendar for 1921 just issued by Secretary of State Lyons shows that there will be still a number of primaries notwithstanding the state legislature eliminated the direct primaries for state and judicial offices.

June 28 is the first day upon which designating petitions for party candidates may be signed. This applies to municipal, congressional, legislative and local offices. Eight weeks is allowed for the preparation of the petitions, August 16 being the last day on which designating petitions may be filed. There will be ten days more for candidates to make up their minds if they really want to run, as August 26 is the last day for the filing of declinations. By August 30 all vacancies caused by such declinations must be filed, and on September 1 the custodians of primary records must have certified the designations to the secretary of state.

September 18 will be primary day throughout the state. By September 19 the results of all such primaries must be filed with the secretary of state. Between September 20 and 27 must take place all state and judicial conventions, and the latter date is the latest time for filing certificates of party nominations at such conventions. Candidates thus nominated have until September 30 to file declinations, and the party committees have until October 4 to fill vacancies caused by declination. Independent nominations may be filed between September 27 and October 4, with the limit of declination set at October 10 and the time for the filing of vacancies expiring on October 14. Registration days will follow; absentee voters must file their ballots by October 22. November 8 will be election day.

"After Your Child's Bath
Mothers Should Use Sykes Comfort Powder," says Nurse Soper

Peekskill, N. Y.—"I am sending you the picture of a dear little boy on whom I have used Sykes Comfort Powder with wonderful results. In my work as a nurse I have never found any powder so soothing and healing.

When used daily after a baby's bath it keeps the skin free from chafing, rashes, scalding and soreness. There is nothing like it."—Mrs. Sadie A. Soper, Nurse, Peekskill, N. Y.

The reason Sykes Comfort Powder is successful in such cases is because it contains six healing, antiseptic ingredients not found in ordinary talcums.

BRIAND PUTS OFF CONFERENCE

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Paris, May 31.—Premier Lloyd-George's proposal for an immediate meeting with Premier Briand to discuss the Silesia issue was rejected by the latter today and it now appears that a fortnight will elapse before formal inter-Allied discussions are opened. In the meantime experts will meet in Silesia instead of Paris so that they can gather first hand information on the ground of the Polish-German dispute.

Premier Lloyd George had suggested that he meet Premier Briand at Boulogne tomorrow or Thursday to take up the Silesian matter. The French premier did not look with favor upon a conference at this time, believing that the experts should have an opportunity to study the situation and make a detailed report upon which the premiers and the supreme council could work.

The British premier had suggested that if France were unwilling to open the discussions until the experts could make a report, the experts should then be sent to Silesia at once.

Premier Lloyd-George said that he would be busy all next week and would not be able to meet M. Briand if the conference were not held this week. As the situation stood this afternoon, after the despatch of the French note to London, the Silesian meeting will take place some time between the 12th and 16th of June.

The French cabinet met today to discuss the Bavarian disarmament question. No formal decision was taken owing to the lack of sufficient detailed information.

Hurt Leaving Trolley.

As car 27 was proceeding uptown Monday evening a young lady signalled to the conductor to stop at Delaware avenue and Broadway. She did not wait for it to stop at the "far side" but stepped off near the new gasoline station, was thrown to the pavement and apparently hurt her arm although she was able to walk away. The trolley company, not as yet having received the conductor's report was unable to supply the girl's name.

Designed the White House.

The designer of the White House was James Hoban, born in Ireland about 1758. He came to the United States, settling in Charleston, S. C., and later to Washington when the city was first being laid out. He worked for the government for the greater part of his life. He is chiefly known for his work in connection with the White House, the rebuilding of which he directed after it was burned in 1814.

We herewith wish to express our sincere thanks to our neighbors and friends for the kind and heartfelt sympathy shown us during the long illness of our beloved mother and wife. She travelled from Benghazi across the Libyan desert to the oasis of Kufra, the headquarters of the Senussi never before visited by a white woman, and only once by a European (Rohlfe) over 40 years ago. Hilles, of the Republican National Committee, will be appointed United States Commissioner of Immigration at New York to succeed Frederick Wallis. Mr. Tod served in the navy during the war, receiving the Navy Cross for his service and the French Legion of Honor. He was credited with being responsible for the improvement made in the harbor of Brest, France, whereby the handling of ships could be facilitated.

Brazil's Opportunity.

Brazil, which is almost wholly in the tropics, has the opportunity to upset the belief that no people can reach the very highest civilization in a tropical climate. The latest census credits Brazil with 30,000,000 people, which makes it the second American country in point of population. Some modern men of science, most of them British, maintain that when means have been found to utilize the heat of the sun as mechanical energy the tropics will become centers of production and therefore of civilization. If that should be true, what country could match Brazil, with its great resources of minerals, timber and land, and its great navigable rivers?—Youth's Companion.

Fruit Once Considered Medicine.

Many articles which we now use as food were formerly eaten as medicine. In the Middle ages strawberries were prescribed as a cure for consumption and ulcers. And long after that Linnaeus described them in his works on botany as a remedy for gout. They were also recommended by the physicians of old as excellent good to cure the liver, the blood and the spleen. In the British isles today, and perhaps in America, thousands of bushels are [illegible] by the strawberry as an aid to the complexion.

Words of Wise Men.

There are [illegible] as well as [illegible]. [illegible] Everlon [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] forgiving [illegible] is a [illegible] game.

For four terror-filled days, two babies hungered and struggled for breath in a closet four feet long and sixteen inches wide, and between long stretches of sleep cried the weary hours away. The tots were seven-year-old Harry Farber and Stella Weiner four years old. They had been playing hide-and-seek in the neighborhood of their homes in Paterson, N. J. Seeking a good place to hide they entered an empty apartment house and hid themselves in a closet in an empty room. The little girl who was "it" rushed the closet door and slammed it, locking it automatically. The children were found four days later by two boys who retired to the apartment to play a quiet game of poker. Hearing a strange noise in the closet one of the boys flung the door open and the little boy, who had been propped up against the single crevice in the panel in an effort to breathe, fell out of the closet in an unconscious heap. The little girl was half conscious and lying on the floor of the tiny covert. The boy admitted that he cried "a little bit," but that he mostly yelled and kicked the door and tried to soothe the saddened little companion of his solitude. All Paterson had been hunting for the missing children and now there is peace once again in the households.

Truth is stranger than fiction. A fitting title for the odd love drama being enacted in the small town of Anderson, Indiana, which is destined to make over the lives of four young people. On the outskirts of the town are the humble cottages of Gordon Huffman and his wife, Loretta and of William Munsy and his wife, Glee. The cottages are separated by a scant ten feet or so, therefore, it was inevitable that the neighborly couples should become friendly. The Munsys moved into their little cottage last December. The wives immediately became great friends, and it was not long before the two men reached the point where they understood each other. There followed two or three months of pleasant association, week ends in the woods and short pleasure trips together. Apparently it was suddenly discovered that each of the four had fallen in love with the other's mate. Divorce proceedings have been started, and in the meantime the two young couples continue on the friendliest of terms, awaiting the action of the courts and the time when they will be free to exchange mates.

Haiti's Forest Wealth.

Large forests of pines are to be found in the mountains in the interior of Haiti, but lack of transportation [illegible] for domestic needs. Large quantities of [illegible] are imported from the United States. A few small sawmills are located in various sections of the island, but these cannot begin to supply the local markets. Hardwoods are plentiful.

"Gone to the Dogs."

The ancient Romans called the [illegible] in die "canis," the Latin word for dog. To them three aces was to [illegible] the pot in their gambling [illegible] the saying "gone to the dogs" as a synonym for ruin or bad luck. The expression "[illegible]" [illegible] [illegible] is called a "[illegible]." Our [illegible] is [illegible] with [illegible] to the dog, many of them being complimentary.

REARDON HAD A NARROW ESCAPE

When Door Of Gasocutor at City Hall Blew Off, and Sheet of Flame Shot Out Severely Burning Officer About Head and Eyes.

Policeman William J. Reardon is nursing some bad burns on his forehead as a result of a lucky escape from losing his eyesight at the city hall Saturday morning when the door on the gasocutor, used to send dogs to dog heaven, blew off, and a sheet of fame shot forth.

From some unknown cause the gasocutor, which was filled with illuminating gas, caught fire Saturday morning, and as Officer Reardon and others went out to see what they could do toward extinguishing the flames the heavy door on the gasocutor was suddenly blown off the hinges and Officer Reardon who stood almost directly in front of the gasocutor narrowly escaped being struck by the door. As it was the sheet of flame that shot forth struck him on the forehead burning his eyebrows and singeing his hair and inflicted very painful burns, which, however, did not prevent him from continuing on duty after having [illegible] ed by Police Surgeon Keefe.

Just what caused the gasocutor to get on fire is not known. Stray dogs may now rest in peace until a new door is placed on the gasocutor. In fact it has needed a new door for some time for last week it took two days to gasocute a few cats that had been placed in the box. Evidently a cat is harder to kill with gas than a dog for a dog's life is snuffed out very shortly after he is placed in the gasocutor.

Why Not Be Accomplished?

(Ad. in Chicago Tribune.)

Ladies, gentlemen, boys and girls learn to whistle, warbling, chirps, finger, teeth, flute whistle, imitating forest of birds. Open daily, 9-930, Sunday 10-5. L. C. Groff, Chicago Musical Seminary, 2828 Madison street.

Funny, isn't it, how many fishing worms you find spading the garden and how few when digging for bait?

Back to Earth.

When war waged its wide desolation
He pulled down his fifteen per day
Now it fills him with deep consternation
To think how he tossed it away.

There is one pest worse than the the polecat. We refer to the hardheaded individual who won't apologize when he knows he's wrong and should.

One kind of tightwad is the man who chucks his newspaper out of a street car window after reading it, lest somebody else have a look.

Another advantage of that portable house idea is that it would be so easy to move when undesirable guests were expected.

Woman's intuition may be all that it pretends to be, but we'd back the chances of a well dressed villian any time against those of a trampy looking gentleman.

Let the Office Cat follow you on your vacation. (Adv.)

Fifteen shots were fired in an argument over liquor in Boston last week, and only a gold tooth was struck thereby showing that the men were full of their subject, as the Hickville Times would remark.

The man had sprung from the gutter. Gangster, gunfighter, spawn of a great city's slums. The girl, an invalid, lived on a roof-top. Below her, the roar of the world. Above her, the stars, the infinite blue and the God of her innocent faith. One day the man, pursued by police, rushed into her lonely life.

What comes after that—your heart will cherish always.

GIRL SCOUT CAMP ASSURED

The Girl Scout camp so long hoped for has been definitely planned. The Ideal Park Club House has been leased for this purpose. This camp is under the camp committee of the Ulster County Council of Girl Scouts, Miss Martha Davis, Scout commissioner; Miss Sarah Horton, chairman; Mrs. Elva Bogart, Miss May E. Davis and Dr. Mark O'Meara.

The camp can be reached by automobile bus to Mt. Tremper. Fare 85 cents from Kingston to Mt. Tremper, and their baggage transported to the camp at a small additional charge. Groups of girls will be met every Wednesday during the season. Girls may come for one week or more, but are urged to stay for two weeks at least, as the longer they stay the more benefit they will get from it.

The camp committee has obtained for the resident manager of the camp Mrs. Grace O'Loughlin, B. S., dietitian, Miss May E. Davis; health officer, Dr. Mark O'Meara. The cooking will be in charge of Mrs. Mary Daley. There will be a plentiful supply of good milk and fresh vegetables. Already the sanitation has been inspected by Dr. O'Meara and Dr. Cranston. The water and milk has been examined, also the cows. Those who are planning to go to camp should obtain and fill out a blank form which may be obtained from Scout officers or from Scout Commissioner Davis.

All who know of Ideal Park can readily understand why that site has been chosen for the camp. Near at hand is a beautiful trout pool, where bathing may be enjoyed. Although this is but four or five feet deep, there will be counselors in charge of the girls at all times.

The camp opens July 6 and closes August 31.

Miss Kearney's Entertainment.

The entertainment of aesthetic dancing to be given by the pupils of Miss Katharine Kearney at St. Mary's Hall on Saturday afternoon, for the benefit of the fund for the nurses' home of the Benedictine Hospital is creating much interest both because it will be the first formal appearance of the pupils of this gifted Kingston girl, and also because of the cause for which it is to be given. Tickets for the same may be purchased from the pupils, from members of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Benedictine Hospital, under whose patronage it is being given and from nurses of the hospital. It should be remembered too, that the entertainment will be followed by afternoon tea and general dancing.

Some One Give Material.

It has been learned that Marie Deechler who is at the tuberculosis hospital and who is the young girl who suffered the amputation of both legs, is in need of summer clothing. Mrs. Hayes and her Red Cross workers will be only too glad to make up the necessary clothing for Marie provided other kind friends will donate the material or the money with which to buy the same. It will take four yards of gingham to make Marie a dress and two yards of muslin for underclothing (one set.) So anyone willing to or wishing to participate in this good work by contributing material, should at once notify Mrs Thomas F. Hayes. Telephone 1758-W.

VILLAGERS DO THINGS TO WHITE

According to Down River Papers His Treatment of His French Bride Has Brought Him Much Physical Discomfort and Threats of More.

Sensational stories have emanated from Marlborough for the past two days regarding a popular uprising against Charles Bouck White, founder of the defunct Church of the Social Revolution, because of his alleged ill-treatment of his bride of five weeks, whom he married in Paris and who has left him.

White attracted considerable attention during the world war because of his utterances in regard to the government. Then he dropped out of sight for quite a while. He re-appeared in public print on Sunday when sensational stories sent out from Poughkeepsie were published in the metropolitan newspapers to the effect that a party of twelve men had gone to his house on Monday night, May 23, and after taking him out of his home had driven him thirteen miles toward Newburgh, where they had applied a coat of tar and feathers and then compelled him to walk home. As the distance from Marlborough to Newburgh is only eight miles, it was necessary for today's stories to be revised to conform to geographical conditions and distances, so the scene of the tar-and-feather episode was located near Orange Lake which would provide the necessary distance. A whipping with White as the "whippee" is also declared to have taking place.

Mrs. White is a French girl. According to the newspaper stories she met White in the Latin quarter in Paris by accident and was not formally introduced, but after a three days' acquaintance White proposed marriage. They quarreled on the way across the ocean on their honeymoon, according to these stories, and have been quarreling up to the time that Mrs. White left her husband. She had expected, according to statements attributed to her, that White was wealthy and lived on a large estate. Instead she found he lived in a small cottage in the mountains about three miles from Marlborough, and she was required to begin housekeeping duties with which, apparently, she was not acquainted. Her stories of ill-treatment were told to Justice of the Peace Dayley Hutchins, according to the stories, who issued a warrant for White's arrest but it was not executed as White and his wife effected a reconciliation.

The marriage of White and the French girl occurred on April 21 at the American Episcopal Church in Paris and upon arriving in New York the pair went to live at a hotel. They arrived at Marlborough on May 8 and Mrs. White left her husband on May 19. According to Deputy Sheriff William McConnell, White offered to pay his wife's fare to New York, to pay her board there until she could sail for France and to pay her return passage, but of this amount he gave only a check for $21 and only $3 in cash.

Bernard F. Cecire, a lawyer with offices at Marlborough and Poughkeepsie, has been retained by Mrs. White to bring proceedings to annul the marriage, and according to the Poughkeepsie stories Cecire demanded $500 alimony and counsel fee pending the trial of the suit; White was willing to pay $200 but two days after the "night riders" had applied tar and feathers White agreed to pay $400. This is interesting, if true. Before her marriage, Mrs. White was Andree E. Millie Simon, whose father was a resident of Rheims, but who lost his property during the war.

Inquiries by The Freeman today of residents of Marlborough, who live in the village, failed to disclose the authenticity of the scare stories sent out by Poughkeepsie regarding the tar and feather episode or of White being driven out of the village by excited men and boys on Monday, when they are claimed by the Poughkeepsie story-writers to have hurled rotten vegetables at him. The only violence appears to be talk among the young men and boys as to what they would like to do to White not only because of his ill treatment of his bride but because of his general attitude toward the government during the war. No sympathy is wasted either on White or on the people who are trying to give Marlborough a reputation for lawlessness which it does not deserve.

A telephone query to the Poughkeepsie paper which had the story first elicits the information that White has since returned a $200 diamond ring to his wife and has given her attorney $400 in cash.

In Memoriam

In loving memory of our beloved mother, [illegible] J. Blander, who died one year ago today, May 31, 1920.

In a nearby graveyard where the trees their branches wave,
Lies the one we loved so dearly, in her cold and lonely grave.
Friends may think that we've forgotten
that our wounded hearts are healed,
Little do they know the sorrow that lies within our hearts concealed.
Through one lonely, dreary year,
there comes again tonight
A picture of our darling mother, the one who made our lives so bright.
The flowers we place on our loved one's grave, may wither and decay,
But the love for her who sleeps there,
will never fade away.
When days are dark and friends are few,
Dear mother, how we long for you.

Would Teach Youth to Think.

To teach people to think, Dr. C. A. Mercier of Bournemouth left $100,000 to be used to found a chair of national logic and scientific method at one of the universities. Among the conditions imposed are clauses directing that: Students are not to be taught what Aristotle or anyone else thought about reasoning, but to think and reason clearly for themselves. The professor is not to be chosen for his knowledge of the work or opinions of other logicians, but for his capacity to think and to reason and to teach. In selecting the professor preference is to be given to the candidate who does not know either Greek or German and, in any case, when appointed, such professor is not to devote more than one-twelfth of his teaching time in teaching the logic of Aristotle and the schools, nor more than one-twenty-fourth in teaching the logic of Hegel or other Germans.—Montreal Family Herald.

An Irish King in Tahiti.

James Norman Hall has stirred up a veritable tumult in South Boston. In an article in Harper's Magazine he tells of meeting on a South Sea island an Irishman named Riley. Originally a native of Boston the son of an Irish immigrant, Riley is now the king of a South Sea island, with untold riches, a beautiful Tahitian queen, and hundreds of loyal subjects, all according to the best traditions of romance.

But who is he? South Boston is largely populated by Rileys, and Mr. Hall does not specify to which branch of the family his hero belongs. Since the publication of the article there are but few of his name who do not claim kinship with the South Sea man, and who, since, as everybody knows, all the Rileys are descended from the ancient king of Ireland, is but enjoying his natural right in ruling from a royal throne—or hammock.

Oil Shells to the Rescue.

Oil thrown on the waves will calm them. Hence it has been suggested that oil shells be fired from life-line guns in the coast guard stations, to calm the waters around stranded ships.

If the oil shells are hurled well to the windward of a ship, and are made to explode on contact with the water, the oil will soon drift around the ship and make it possible for a lifeboat to be launched in safety.

An ideal oil shell would be one that could carry a gallon of oil.—Popular Science Monthly.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, May 31—The stock market opened fairly active this morning and changes in prices continued irregular. There was no particular feature. U. S. Steel exdividend of 1¼ per cent was down ¼ at 81. Baldwin Locomotive was up ⅜ at 82⅜. Studebaker was down ⅞ at 69¼. Crucible was off ¼ at 69⅜. Retail Stores advanced ⅛ to 60⅛, new Haven advanced ¼ to 19⅜ and United States Rubber declined ¼ to 68. The motor stocks showed pronounced weakness chiefly because of the announcements of reductions. Pierce Arrow yielded ⅝ to 22⅛ and Kelly-Springfield declined 1¼ to 39⅜. Mexican Petroleum started with a gain of ½ to 150¼ and dropped to 149½. Royal Dutch was in supply declining 1⅜ to 58¼. A number of stocks sold ex-dividend among them Southern Pacific, ex 1½, ranging from 75¾ to 75¼, showing a slight net gain. U. S. Rubber was heavy yielding 1⅝ to 66⅜.

Some of the brokers described the market as of a holiday character. A special feature was Oklahoma Producing and Refining, which sold at a new low level of 1⅜, followed by the announcement of dividend suspension, against the closing price of three bid last week. After this decline the stock rallied to 2⅛. Pacific Oil was under pressure, falling ¾ to 35⅝. Trading in this stock lagged recently because of the failure of dividend predictions to be so materialized. Crucible Steel dropped 1¼ to 69¼. Studebaker after being forced down to 68⅝ had a vigorous advance to 70½.

The passing of the dividend on Pierce-Arrow preferred was followed by a drive against stock which forced it down to 51¾, a loss of 3¾ points from the close on Friday, but support was met and it had a quick recovery to 56. The common, which sold down to 21⅛, was also in fair demand and rallied to 22. Republic dropped to 54¾, a new low for the year and Bethlehem Steel "B" showed a loss of 1⅞ selling at 55½. Punta Alegre sugar had the widest decline of the day falling over 3 points to 30¼. Atlantic Gulf was also heavy declining 2 points to 36¼.

The market closed weak; government bonds unchanged; railway and other bonds irregular.

Tulips Quickly Change Color.

Tulips are more responsive to dyes than carnations or callas, a Chicago florist found by experimenting. When dyes of various colors were dissolved in vases and the flowers placed there, in the colors progressed up into the blooms of the tulips in about thirty minutes.

Girls at Lighthouse, Although Blind, Dance With Ease, Grace and Beauty

Aesthetic dancing is not beyond the powers of these blind girls from the New York Lighthouse for the Blind, who recently made their bow to society at one of the most brilliant balls of the New York season. Since early childhood they have received all their instruction in the Lighthouse gymnasium, and at this ball, their first big public performance, they showed such grace and ease that it was impossible to convince many spectators that the dancers could not even distinguish daylight.

They were enthusiastic about the social dancing, as well, and missed scarcely a one-step or fox-trot.

The first principle of the education of the blind is that they differ from the rest of the world in only one respect—their sightlessness—and that they too must have work to make them happy, and recreation and exercise to fit them. Three of the girls are high school students and the fourth is in college. They attend classes with sighted girls, and are exceptionally quick pupils. Their gymnastic work has always been given at the Lighthouse, for the blind cannot depend upon imitation by the eye for learning new movements.

These girls and others like them swim and dive, play games and roller skate, and at the girls' camp which they attend in the summer, wear bloomers and middy blouses just as in girls' camps the world over. They take hikes, have camp-fire parties, and are especially fond of rowing.

Social service, industrial training, and recreational activities are combined at the Lighthouse. Its aim is the education of the sightless to take their places in the seeing world. In the weaving, sewing and basketry rooms the men and women workers are self-[illegible] are turned out by their clever fingers. Others learn wireless telegraphy, typewriting and stenography (by the Braille raised type), and music. And whenever the women hear the pleasant voice of Miss Winifred Holt, known as "The Lady of the Lighthouse," they greet her with songs and college cheers. For she is the best-loved visitor at the Lighthouse, and the personal friend of all the blind workers there.

The Committee for Lighthouses for the Blind is asking for $2,000,000. President Harding has accepted the Honorary Chairmanship of the Committee, and Andrew W. Mellon, Secretary of the Treasury, is Honorary Treasurer. Franklin D. Roosevelt, former Assistant Secretary of the Navy, is Chairman. Contributions may be sent to Lewis L. Clarke, Treasurer, at national headquarters, 111 East Fifty-ninth Street, New York City.

FINE TRIBUTE TO WASHINGTON

Napoleon's Eulogy of the World's Greatest Man Regarded as Worthy of Eternal Preservation.

Approach of the hundredth anniversary of the death of Napoleon Bonaparte recalls the order of the day which he issued in his capacity as first consul, to the French army on the occasion of the death of the first President of the United States. The document is as follows:

"Soldiers! Washington is dead! This great man fought against tyranny. He consolidated the liberty of his native land. His memory will always be cherished by the French people, as well as by all free men of the two worlds, but more especially by the soldiers of France, who, like himself and the soldiers of America in times past, are fighting for equality and liberty. In recognition thereof, the first consul orders that for ten days all the standards and flags of the troops of the republic shall be draped with crape. (Signed) Bonaparte."

Not content with this, Bonaparte insisted that an official eulogy of the liberator of America should be pronounced, in the name of the republic, in the Temple of Mars, the name then given to the chapel of the Palace of the Invalides. The task was confided to Marcellin de Fontanes, the poet, who was given six days to prepare it. De Fontanes accomplished his task to the satisfaction of Bonaparte, and it is generally agreed that his eulogy of Washington ranks among his very finest works.

London's Fine Public Buildings.

The most expensive of all London's public buildings are the law courts, covering seven acres. They cost more than $12,000,000.

Brigadier-General Charles Harington, commander of the Allied forces in Constantinople who, according to a dispatch from Constantinople, has gone to London to lay the military situation in the Turkish capital before the British authorities. The operations of bandits in the territory surrounding the capital and even in Constantinople, have assumed serious proportions. The country, according to the dispatch, faces a famine, as the fields are untilled, the people being terrorized and afraid to leave their villages. It is said that thousands of Russians who were formerly soldiers have turned outlaws, and deserters from the Greek and Turkish armies are included in the bands operating outside the city. The streets of the capital are said to be unsafe at night.

Use for Ultra-Violet Rays.

For some years ultra-violet rays have been used for sterilizing water, milk and other fluids. The idea has now been applied to the disinfecting of barrels and casks.

According to Circumstances.

Jud Tunkins says that if something for nothing were a sign of merit the man who plays the bass viol would invariably be the best musician in the orchestra.

HERO OF THREE COUNTRIES

South American Republics United in Their Desire to Do Honor to Memory of Bolivar.

The unveiling of a statue to Simon Bolivar, known as the George Washington of South America, took place in New York April 19.

There are statues of Bolivar in Caracas, Bogota, Lima and elsewhere. He was South America's superman on horseback. He drove the Spanish out. He became "Jefe Supremo" of the northern half of the continent. ("Heyfay Soopraymow," please, signifying "Supreme Chief.") He fought 400 battles and escaped five attempted assassinations.

Bolivar has been described as "mercurial, impractical, visionary, recklessly daring, vainglorious, sympathetic, cunning, sensitive, intense, ambitious, with no sense of proportion, cruel and kind in the same breath, giving vent to the highest sentiments of frenzied patriotism, and practicing the most absolute despotism." History credits him with having spent 90 per cent of his large fortune for his country, Venezuela, and with having made no private use of public funds, although long in control of the revenues of Colombia, Peru and Bolivia. He failed in an attempt to unite all these countries under one flag, lost his power and popularity and died in exile.

She Had Simple Tastes.

A little girl, left in a room with a glass of soft drinks, was discovered trying to communicate with the queen of the fairies. She was calling down the ball of one flower and listening at the other, a small dimpled hand with a crumb for the wish, firmly grasping either green stalk. "Please, send a cake and a big doll," she said, "at my house, and a new daddy and a doll so I can go and spend my pennies."

K. H. S. WINS IN PITCHERS' BATTLE

Newburgh's Errors, Though, Are Chiefly Responsible For Locals Getting Long End of 2-1 Score.

Caunitz for Kingston and McGuigan for Newburgh for seven innings Saturday gave a real demonstration of how real pitchers play baseball. Then the visitors broke in and scored a run only to have Kingston come back in their half of the eighth and score twice as many and enough to win the game.

For seven innings both pitchers fought it out and both were given excellent support. In the lucky seventh Newburgh started things moving when Hopshe was given a pass to first and stole second, scoring on Pizarro's hit. Kingston came back in the eighth when Cahill dropped out a double to left field and Caunitz sacrificed him to third with a well placed bunt. Johnson batted for Case and hit to Hopshe who made a bad throw to first and left Johnson safe on first. Muller fanned and then Sears pushed one out to Hopshe The throw was perfect but Newburgh was doomed and Mohr muffed the ball and Cahill trotted across the home plate tying the score and Johnson came around with the run that won the game.

D. A. R. Meeting.

The June meeting of Wiltwyck Chapter, D. A. R., will be held at the chapter house on Thursday afternoon of this week at 3 o'clock as usual, preceded by the local board at 2 o'clock. The program for the afternoon will be in charge of Mrs. Cornelia Stafford, Mrs. Floyd Bonesteel and Mrs. F. J. Gallagher, with Mrs. E. B. Adams and Mrs. V. B. Van Wagonen as hostesses.

Bridal Shower.

A pretty bridal shower was held at the home of Mrs. E. Molyneaux, 274 Clinton avenue, in honor of Miss Catherine Albrecht of 20 Staples street, this city. Covers were laid for ten couples. The color scheme was pink and white. Dainty refreshments were served and the guests departed in the wee small hours of the morning extending to Miss Albrecht their most hearty congratulations. A number of miscellaneous gifts were presented during the evening. Miss Albrecht's wedding will take place in the very near future.

Sinclair-Kane.

An interesting contract was executed on Decoration Day at Menaltink, the coutry home at Shokan, New York, of J. Waldo Smith, chief engineer of the board of water supply of the city of New York. The contracting parties were Miss Margery H Kane of New York and Duncan G. Sinclair of Fairmont, West Virginia, the two being joined together in one firm by the Rev. Putnam Cady of Kingston. Miss Alice Barringer was the bride's only attendant, and Mr. Smith gave the bride away and acted as best man for the groom. The wedding was a private one and there were present only Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Sinclair of Fairmont, West Virginia, the parents of the groom, and the family of Frank A. Barringer of Shokan. The wedding took place on the lawn of Menaltink, overlooking the Ashokan reservoir and surrounded by the most noted peaks of the Catskill Mountain, an ideally romantic setting for the occasion. The house, built over 150 years ago, has up to the present happily escaped the modernizing influence of today and is much the same as it was when built. It has a quiet charm and an air of romance. Within the past twelve years there have been at least four honeymoons spent at Menaltink and it is quite appropriate that it should now be the scene of a wedding. The bride wore a blue crepe dress and blue plume hat and carried a bouquet of pink French roses and lilies of the valley. Miss Barringer wore white organdie and a white leghorn hat trimmed with pink flowers and ribbon and carried a basket of pink flowers. Mr. and Mrs. Sinclair will take an extended honeymoon trip through the Great Lakes and other parts of the west. Miss Kane has a wide circle of friends in New York and Kingston. The groom is a mechanical engineer, a graduate of Steven Institute of Technology, class of 1902, and [illegible] one of [illegible] bers of the [illegible] Equipment Co. The [illegible] come as a great surprise to the numerous friends of the contracting parties, inasmuch as they have persisted the onslaught of Cupid [illegible] have persistently declared that marriage state had no [illegible] them. As is usual in such cases, the fall has been a very hard one. breakfast was served for the wedding party at 1 o'clock in the afternoon and the guests departed [illegible] the bride and groom [illegible] their honeymoon [illegible] Menaltink.

The charming Princess [illegible], wife of the Polish Minister [illegible] land, Prince Jean, scion of [illegible] Polish house of [illegible], [illegible] known in America, [illegible] here many years. He [illegible] the United States shortly before the start of the Great War, and [illegible] in England was arrested and confined as prisoner [illegible] quence of his being [illegible] of the emperor of Austria [illegible] officer on the reserve [illegible] the Austrian cavalry. He was later liberated on parole.

The Air We Breathe.

A cubic foot of air weighs [illegible] one and three-tenths ounces. [illegible] it is reckoned that a single individual breathes in 12 months [illegible] and one-fifth tons of air. To keep [illegible] alive for threescore and ten years will require 450 tons of air. The population of the United States breathes annually [illegible] tons of air. The requirement for the population of the world is in the neighborhood of 10,500,000 [illegible] tons.

"Miss Nancy."

This term is generally supposed to have originated in connection with Anna Oldfield, an actress of the Eighteenth century. Her vanity was so colossal that on her deathbed she requested that her remains be laid in state dressed in "very fine Brussels lace headdress, a Holland shirt, with tucker and double ruffles, new kid gloves, etc."

Apt Description.

Florence was told to sit on the front steps and not to go away. A neighbor of ours who wore heavy shell-rimmed glasses was very fond of her and happened to pass by while she was sitting there. He stopped and spoke to her—at the same time producing a bag of candy. Running into the house she exclaimed: "Oh, mamma, look what I got from the opra glasses man."—Chicago American.
